Nov. 22, 1864

The Nation.

President Cleveland can only anticipate the swift result of the contest in the Court of Public Opinion, as that opinion of the people will be expressed in a manner hardly to be surmounted by Mr. Lincoln. The tariff is the key to the contest. If the people are to be satisfied in the outcome of this contest, they must have a tariff reform. If Mr. Cleveland believes it is necessary, he must not hesitate to take the lead in this respect. The country demands it, and it is the duty of every statesman who seeks to be placed in a position of power, to recognize the will of the people.

THE STRIKE AND THE VOTE.

To the Editor of The Nation:

Do you not think that in estimating the probability of a successful strike, we should consider the state of the country? If the people are not satisfied with the results of the last election, they will not tolerate a strike that may lead to a general strike. We believe that the strike is bound to fail, as it is a venture in politics that is not supported by the public sentiment.

Sincerely yours,

C. A. W.

Nov. 22, 1864.

WASHINGTON, D.C.

[Article]

To the Editor of The Nation:

Mr. President, we are the spokesmen for a number of persons who are deeply interested in the strike. We believe that the strike is bound to fail, as it is a venture in politics that is not supported by the public sentiment.

Sincerely yours,

C. A. W.

Nov. 22, 1864.

WASHINGTON, D.C.

[Article]

To the Editor of The Nation:

Mr. President, we are the spokesmen for a number of persons who are deeply interested in the strike. We believe that the strike is bound to fail, as it is a venture in politics that is not supported by the public sentiment.

Sincerely yours,

C. A. W.

Nov. 22, 1864.

WASHINGTON, D.C.

[Article]

To the Editor of The Nation:

Mr. President, we are the spokesmen for a number of persons who are deeply interested in the strike. We believe that the strike is bound to fail, as it is a venture in politics that is not supported by the public sentiment.

Sincerely yours,

C. A. W.

Nov. 22, 1864.

WASHINGTON, D.C.

[Article]

To the Editor of The Nation:

Mr. President, we are the spokesmen for a number of persons who are deeply interested in the strike. We believe that the strike is bound to fail, as it is a venture in politics that is not supported by the public sentiment.

Sincerely yours,

C. A. W.

Nov. 22, 1864.

WASHINGTON, D.C.

[Article]