The Nation.

[Vol. 76, No. 1927]

May 21, 1903

Mr. Stevens and the Public

Mr. Stevens has just made a state-ment that all his legislative activities in Washington have been for the benefit of the people. As a matter of fact, his legislative efforts were for the benefit of his constituents. Mr. Stevens is a patron of the people, and his interest in legislation is for the people's benefit. His work in Congress has been for the benefit of the people, and he has done his best to secure justice for them.

The political career of Mr. Stevens was a complete failure. His efforts in Congress were not successful. He was not able to get his legislation passed, and his influence was not as great as he would have wished. His capacity was not sufficient to carry through his proposed reforms. His efforts were not directed towards their proper ends, and his work in Congress was not as successful as he would have liked.

The political career of Mr. Stevens was a failure, and his efforts in Congress were not successful. His influence was not as great as he would have wished, and his capacity was not sufficient to carry through his proposed reforms. His work in Congress was not as successful as he would have liked.